2016/17 public justice interns Asha Kerr-Wilson and Bolu Coker on Parliament Hill

CPJ's public justice interns work along-side CPJ's staff in Ottawa for one year. The interns assist senior staff and are actively engaged in a variety of work, including research, policy analysis, framing public policy options, presenting to Parliament, meeting with MPs and political staff, as well as engaging the media, leaders in society, CPJ members and the Canadian public.

Along with CPJ's other internship opportunities, CPJ offers these paid, year-long, Public Justice Internships on an on-going basis. The first intern began in September 2007.

Application dead-line: April 9, 2017. Start date: September 5, 2017.

CITIZENS FOR PUBLIC JUSTICE

Citizens for Public Justice (CPJ), is a national organization of citizens inspired by faith to act for justice in Canadian public policy.

CPJ's mission is to promote public justice – the political dimension of loving our neighbours – in Canada by shaping key public policy debates through research and analysis, publishing and public dialogue. CPJ encourages citizens, leaders in society, and governments to support policies and practices that reflect God's call for love, justice and the flourishing of Creation.

CPJ focuses on many public justice issues, including, but not limited to, poverty in Canada, ecological justice, democratic governance and refugee rights.

After 54 years of service, CPJ is stepping up to a new level of effort and impact. We have undertaken careful strategic planning which will build on our strengths and develop a series of new opportunities for the organization. CPJ has expanded our impact by focusing our policy work in Ottawa, more boldly, prominently, and clearly, with a timely and distinctive public justice presence. The long-term effect will be to build public justice together in Canada.

CPJ opened its office in Ottawa on July 1, 2007.

A key component of achieving a new level of effort and impact has been CPJ's Public Justice Internship. For some time, we have noticed a keen and growing interest in CPJ's work among young people. We have enjoyed the contribution of lively and energetic young people to our work community as summer interns, through short-term contracts, or as volunteers. These, in turn, have developed into long-term relationships, support and interest. The Public Justice Internship is intended to further develop such relationships and provide a unique opportunity for young people to engage in public policy work.

In 2017 - 2018, thanks to the financial support of our committed donors, CPJ is able to offer two paid internship opportunities. One of these interns will be specifically tasked with strengthening CPJ's research and advocacy work on refugee rights issues, while the other intern will assist in CPJ's work on poverty and inequality issues in Canada.

OTHER INTERNSHIP OPPORTUNITIES WITH CPJ

All of CPJ's internship opportunities strive to provide occasions for young people to directly experience the life of a public policy organization. This means engaging in the work of CPJ, but as much as possible also the community of CPJ supporters.

CPJ will continue to offer its summer intern program (subject to government funding) and will engage students who are part of academic programs at, for example, St. Paul's, Trinity Western University's Laurentian Centre, Algonquin College, Carleton University and the University of Ottawa. Please visit our website or contact CPJ staff to inquire about or propose other volunteer internship opportunities.

PUBLIC JUSTICE INTERNSHIP

Starting September 2017 two interns will work along-side CPJ's staff in Ottawa for one year. The interns will assist senior staff and be actively engaged in a variety of work, including research, policy analysis, framing public policy options, presenting to Parliament, meeting with MPs and political staff, as well as engaging the media, leaders in society, CPJ members and the Canadian public.

---

BENEFITS

Interns will:

- Be equipped to ask probing questions, to undertake public justice policy analysis, and to contribute to public justice in Canada.
- Experience directly the policy analysis and political decision-making world of Ottawa.
- Enjoy structured learning opportunities surrounding the meaning of public justice, Canadian government structure, public policy analysis, non-profit operations, and navigating Parliament Hill.
- Gain understanding of the specific rewards and challenges of a non-profit organization.
- Gain experiences appropriate for a resume or CV, including at least one published article in CPJ's newsletter and be named an author on publicly available research papers or web features.
- Obtain a reference letter for future work or school.
- Receive a stipend of $32,780.

CPJ will:

- Enjoy the contribution of lively and energetic young people to its work community.
- Increase our effort and impact by having qualified policy support staff.
- Build a growing pool of people who embody a public justice perspective and who are actively engaged in public policy analysis in various sectors of society.

RESPONSIBILITIES

Each year CPJ's agenda will be slightly different and may have a different policy emphasis. However, in general the Public Justice Interns, working closely with senior policy staff at CPJ, can expect to be engaged in some of the following activities:

- Researching, writing and editing policy papers, briefs, blogs and articles.
- Preparing research summaries related to policy analysis, including article or book summaries and book reviews.
- Drafting policy memos, fact sheets, op-eds and letters to the editor for senior staff.
- Tracking legislation, monitoring policy debates, web and media monitoring.
- Taking part in policy briefings and staff meetings.
- Helping organize events, consultations and workshops.
- Assisting in communications, outreach and engagement with MPs, political staff, department officials, media, coalition partners, leaders in society, CPJ members and the Canadian public.
- Phoning and email engagement with CPJ supporters on campaigns, activities, and CPJ's annual fundraising telethon.
- Participation in CPJ's social media strategy.
- General office duties as appropriate.

QUALIFICATIONS

---

CPJ encourages applications for its Public Justice Internships from those prepared to participate enthusiastically in CPJ's activities, policy issues and working community. We particularly seek young university graduates with solid academic records; strong writing, research, and communication skills; and a lively interest in public policy.

Framework for the position:

Since this internship is explicitly intended to develop understanding and skills in CPJ's public justice approach to public policy, the successful candidate must express commitment to CPJ's faith-based vision for public policy work and express strong affinity with CPJ's core guidelines documents.

Specific qualifications:

- Demonstrated interest in public justice framing of public policy.
- Demonstrated research (web and library based) skills and developing skills in policy analysis.
- Good communicator – written, oral, and interactive skills.
- Good organizational skills.
- Relevant university degree (eg. political science, economics, social work, public policy, public administration.)

- Appropriate computer skills.
- English/French bilingual ability will be an asset.
- Eligible to work in Canada (CPJ cannot be responsible for arranging visas for applicants.)

TERMS

- Full-time, based in Ottawa, for one year from September 2017 to August 2018
- Stipend of $32,780. Inclusion in CPJ's employee health plan.

CPJ'S TEAM

CPJ's team is a relatively small work community. We seek new persons who have the flexibility to thrive cheerfully in a small office. This requires a certain measure of fluidity in tasks as circumstances change and as projects develop. We all pitch in to help each other as needed, celebrate special occasions together, and enjoy camaraderie around a common mission.

CPJ wishes to encourage diversity within its team. CPJ will endeavour to hire qualified applicants who expand the diversity of our organization.
